What is the Whitehill & Bordon Integration Project?

The Whitehill & Bordon Integration Project is a collection of transport schemes planned to be put in place over a number of years. Once fully open the relief road will become the A325, allowing through traffic to be removed from the existing road, although local traffic will still continue to use this route.

The plans involve a package of transport measures to support Whitehill & Bordon's regeneration into a Green and Healthy Town, including:

- widening footways to provide more and safer routes for pedestrians and cyclists
- providing more safer crossing points for pedestrians and cyclists
- making it easy for existing residents to access the new facilities
- making it easier for local drivers to get about
- reducing traffic speeds in key locations such as the entrance to the new town centre
